Restoration in South Carolina—Speech of W W Boyce

At a meeting held in Winnsboro (S C), June 21st, to petition President Johnson to restore the State Government, W W Boyce spoke as follows:

Mr President: I approve of the object of the meeting. It is greatly to our interest to have civil government established in the State. By the theory of our institutions, while a few great interests are exclusively confided to the Federal authority, a large mass of legislation is reserved to the State individually. The sooner we have a State Government in operation, the sooner we will have control of our local legislation, and the sooner we may look for the withdrawal of military authority. The military, it is true, are acting, so far as I have learned, both in this State and adjoining States, with great propriety. But still it is preferable to live under a civil government.

I am satisfied from what I learned at Washington that President Johnson will extend to this State the same privilege of establishing the State Government that he has and is extending to the States of North Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, etc. No discrimination will be made against this State. I am satisfied that the President is ready to establish our State Government as soon as he thinks public opinion is ripe for it. The object of this meeting is to make known the sense of the people of this district upon the subject. From all I can learn upon this point, and I have taken every opportunity of informing myself of the wishes of the people of the State, I am satisfied the great mass of the people, by an overwhelming majority almost to unanimity, earnestly desire the establishment of State authority in entire harmony with the Government of the United States. I apprehend that in this large meeting there will be but one opinion on the subject.

I might stop here, but I presume you desire to hear something of my late visit to Washington. At the instance of some of our most influential citizens, I went on to see the President of the United States. I had been well acquainted with him a member of the Senate of the United States. I had heard so much of him, his talents, the obstacles he had overcome, and the controlling influence he had acquired in his State, that I took pains to form his acquaintance, and observed him with deep interest. I knew that a man who had accomplished what he had, who from the most adverse position had risen to be, successively, a member of the Legislature, Member of Congress, Governor, and Senator, was no ordinary man. I respected in him the man who had erected his own statue, and found Johnson to be a man of remarkable talents, immense energy, great good sense, strong will, with perfect self reliance, a man who belonged to himself and not to another.

No one can have a greater abhorrence of that ineffably stupid crime, the assassination of Lincoln, than I have, but I do not think that thereby the Southern States have fallen into the hands of a cruel tyrant as has been imagined by some. Emancipation is conceded to be a fixed fact. President Johnson, I am satisfied, will deal with our people in no ungenerous spirit. All who accept the existing order of things, who in good faith desire to be peaceful and loyal citizens will, as a general rule, in my opinion, experience the clemency of the Government. On the great question of the right of suffrage in these States President Johnson has taken the conservative position of referring the matter to the States themselves. For this he has received the opposition of the extreme wing of the Republican party. We cannot but attend the issue of this difference of opinion with great interest, and I think the progress of events is such as to indicate that these States will give no lukewarm support to the Administration of President Johnson.

I consider slavery as gone, and the best thing for us to do is to recognize that fact distinctly and unequivocally, and accept it in perfect good faith, with all its logical consequences. Any other course is only going to protract and intensify the darkness of the night through which we are now passing. Let us recognize the great fact that the negro is no longer a slave, and let us act toward him in a kind spirit. This does not, of course, imply that we are to sacrifice ourselves for him, but it means that we are to give him a fair chance. This is our policy, this our duty. Less than this will not satisfy our sister States. If then, after a fair trial, emancipation proves to be a failure, and the negro race is an incubus on the country, it will become necessary to colonize them in another land.

Our greatest statesmanship consists of pacification with the North. Every man should lend himself to this work. Whoever does a kindness to a Northern man is doing a wise thing for his country. Let us forget the horrible struggle through which we have passed as much as we can. Let us look before us and not behind us. Let us not despair of our country. God is wiser than we are. The history of nations is the judgment of God. Let us acquiesce in that destiny, from which there is no appeal. Slavery is gone, but all is not lost. Our fortunes are shattered, we are poor indeed, but the heavens are still above us, and though the way before is rugged, let us with great hearts move forward to fulfill our mission, whatever it may be.

We will soon be invited to resume our position as one of the United States, on terms of perfect equality. As we have had the greatest war upon record, so, I trust, we may have the greatest peace. Upon ourselves will depend in a very large degree how advantageous this peace shall be to us. If we are wise there is still hope for us in the future. If we are weak, every step will only plunge us deeper into the Serbonian bog. We must not under the influence of new ideas. We must not listen to our passions, but to our reason, and the future may be more auspicious to us than the most sanguine now imagine.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

WEDNESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 23, 1865

Freights from San Francisco

Our trade relations with San Francisco is a matter to which we have frequently adverted. Again and again we have tried to show how absolutely necessary it is for us to manage our own business, independent of those who have long been reaping the rich harvest which our industry has provided for them but which we have as yet been too shortsighted to gather for ourselves. This constant, and it may be, tedious iteration, demands no apology for its importunacy. They who would censure these frequent repetitions of the same thing which they have so often heard ought rather to find fault with themselves for not trying to get a clearer conception of their own interests and of the manner in which they should proceed to secure and promote them. In order to exhibit more fully than we have ever yet done, the disadvantages of the situation in which we willingly submit to have others place us as regards trade with San Francisco, we purpose to show forth some facts which we have not hitherto explained in detail but which are worthy of the most attentive consideration.

It is well known that the ordinary cost of freight by steamer from San Francisco to Portland is ten dollars per ton. This charge has often been characterized as a very heavy one. Everybody is aware that enormous sums of money are realized by it. But it is not now our purpose to quarrel with this arrangement. We desire to call general attention to another and a vastly more extravagant and oppressive system of charges on several species of freight by steamer from San Francisco to this place.

On all kinds of freight which, by the piece or package weighs more than half a ton, the steamers raise their price from one half cent, to one and three-quarter cents per pound. In other words, every box, package, or single piece of freight which is heavier than one thousand pounds, is charged for at the rate of thirty-five, instead of ten dollars per ton. This price is exorbitant, or worse, it is outrageous. Just now it is felt very severely by many shippers, for the reason that large quantities of heavy freight are going forward at this time. That this price is beyond all the bounds of moderation, no argument is needed to show. By comparing it with the cost of transportation from New York to San Francisco, it will appear still more excessive.

Precisely the same description of freight which is sent here from San Francisco at a cost of nearly two cents per pound, is sent to San Francisco, by way of the Isthmus, from New York at three or three and a quarter cents. By making this comparison, we see how excessive the rates which we have to pay, are. From New York to San Francisco the distance is six thousand miles. The transit across the Isthmus is to be made at a very heavy cost. Steamers cannot be run on the lower coast or on the Atlantic side for a less sum than the same can be done here. The distance from San Francisco to Portland is about six hundred miles, or about one-tenth of that from New York to the former place. And yet we are compelled to pay considerably more than half as much for the transportation of freight a distance of six hundred miles, as is charged for carrying the same goods over a voyage ten times as long. Besides, on this route there is no expense of trans-shipment, while on the other and longer one, the railroad charges on the Isthmus are very considerable. Freight is taken on board at San Francisco and discharged here within four days, with no trouble or expense arising from handling it two or three or four times, while the time for freight from New York to San Francisco is fully five weeks, and the actual cost of carrying it twice or thrice as much as from the last named place to Portland.

We have thus briefly stated the case. It is easy to discern how the matter stands. Those whose necessity compels them to ship in this direction, find themselves wholly in the power of the extortionists. It behooves us to inquire whether there is no means of escaping from this oppressive burden under which we are laid.

It is quite idle for us to make any appeal for fairer dealing to those who are engaged in this thriving business of carrying goods at such unconscionable rates. They perceive their opportunity and hesitate not to take advantage of it. They own ships, and their neighbors whom they victimise possess none. Hence as matters now are, we find ourselves under the necessity of paying the monopolists whatever sums their elastic consciences, stretched to attenuation by the powers of avarice, will permit them to demand. We do not say that others, having the advantages which they possess would not act similarly; we only mean to show the injustice and extortion which are actually practiced upon our whole people. To denounce these monopolies and to call them by opprobrious names can avail nothing. It will suffice to show the workings of the system they have instituted. When this is once understood, men hereought to see that the remedy lies in themselves. We can escape from the power of those who have made fortunes by our losses, whenever we chose to do so. We take occasion here to repeat what we have often said, and what we shall reiterate until it becomes over worn and threadbare, unless some action is taken upon the matter to which it refers—that we need, and must have vessels of our own. We must sometime, rescue ourselves from this dependent condition. No one supposes that we shall ever build up a great commercial city in Oregon, which will out rival San Francisco, but we can, at least, put our trade relations with that place upon such a footing as will enable us to prosper better than we are doing now. Our merchants and dealers owe it not only to themselves but to the State, to take steps in this matter. Whatever cheapens commodities increases their consumption, and stimulates and augments trade. It was time long ago to have done something to save ourselves from the avarice of others, and further delay will only serve to subject us to further loss.

Suffrage.—The New York News says, on the question of negro suffrage:

> We could mention many more than fifty leading men in the Southern States who seriously consider this the day and the hour when the preservation and stability of Southern interests impel them to return on this subject to the ancient policy of the early Southern Statesmen.

Since this policy, as the News plainly says, was one which favored and conferred universal suffrage, we should like to be informed how it is that both the "Democratic" party and the Southern slave-holders have long contended that ours is strictly a "white man's Government." There seems to be a little inconsistency just here. Perhaps the [illegible] can elucidate and explain.

In his speech last evening, Mr. Ashley said that he was almost prepared to assert that the best quickest and cheapest route for a Pacific railroad lies between the head of navigation on the Missouri and the like point on the Columbia river. Mr. A. wondered that our representatives years ago did not press this route upon public attention, and thus seek to unite distant parts of our country instead of trying to divide them asunder as some, to their eternal shame and infamy have done.

A Disgrace.—Buchanan is the name of a school district in this county. It would be an act of mercy to have the disgraceful appellation changed to one indicative of less treachery and infamy.—Napa Register.

We concur. When the whole nation is so anxious to forget there ever was such a man as Buchanan, that not one in a thousand will demean himself to curse the old miscreant, Napa ought to assist in clothing the hoary traitor with the veil of oblivion.—Sacramento Bee.

[DISPATCHES TO THE DAILY [illegible]]

DATES TO AUGUST 5TH.

The Ram Stonewall—The Cholera Spreading Westward.

Washington, July 20th.—It is understood that the rebel ram Stonewall is now in the service of our government, but will not at present be brought to the United States for fear of the yellow fever now prevalent in Havana where she lies.

The State Department has received advices from the United States Consulate at Palermo, dated July 9th, relative to the Asiatic cholera prevalent in that vicinity. He represents that owing to the prevalence of cholera in Alexandria and some cases having happened at Malta, the Director General of the Health Office of the Island ordered the expulsion of all vessels arriving from all points. There is a panic in Palermo and Messina, and there have been no cases of cholera except in Messina, of persons from Alexandria who died at the lazaretto.

Fire in Williamsburg—Provisional Governor appointed for Louisiana.

New York, July 31.—The Post's Washington special dispatch says: It is confidently reported that the President has appointed Gov. Wells of Louisiana, Provisional Governor of that State.

The Mexican emigrant scheme is being revived. A society called the American Legion has been organized for the purpose of encouraging emigration to Mexico, and for the purpose of developing the resources of that country.

Cincinnati, July 31.—A riot occurred at Cummins[illegible] yesterday, in which three men were shot and a large amount of property destroyed.

Health of the President.

New York, August 1.—A special dispatch to the Herald says: Although the President has derived much benefit from frequent water excursions, his health does not appear to be completely re-established. He was obliged to limit himself to very brief interviews. To-day he was unable to see any person. This morning hopes were entertained that he will be able to hold the usual cabinet meeting to-morrow, though it is by no means certain.

Council of Indian Tribes.

The largest and most important councils of the Indian tribes ever held on this continent, will assemble at Fort Gibson about the 12th of September to settle upon the future relations with the Government, and give new and positive assurances of good conduct and loyalty. Some thirty tribes will be represented, numbering upwards of 75,000. Among the most important tribes to be represented are the Creeks, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Camanches, Senecas, Shawnees, Papaws and Cherokees, all of which are representative tribes of undisputable strength, and they are each accused, more or less, of aiding in the late rebellion. Among the officers of the Government who will confer with them upon the occasion and dictate the course they are to pursue towards the United States, are Commissioner Cooley, of the Indian bureau, Commissioner Edmunds, of the Landoffice, Superintendent Ellis of the Southern agency, Col. Parker, military Secretary on Gen. Grant's staff, Gen. Howe, Gen. Herron and Col. Bent.

Dick Taylor has an Interview with Jeff. Davis.

New York, August 1.—The World's special dispatch says it is understood that the rebel Gen. Dick Taylor has obtained permission for an interview with his brother in law Jeff. Davis, and left for that purpose on Saturday for Fortress Monroe. His application for parole to visit Europe was refused.

Halleck Sails for California—Statement of the Appointment of Governor of Louisiana Denied.

New York, Aug. 1.—Gen. Halleck sailed to-day for California.

The Commercial's Washington special dispatch says the statement that Governor Wells has been appointed Provisional Governor of Louisiana is untrue. Application has been made for provisional Governor, but no action has been taken.

Defence of Jeff. Davis.

New York, August 1.—The Post has a report of the proceedings of a private meeting of friends of Jefferson Davis, held in this city yesterday to devise means for a fair defence of him. It was held at the rooms of C. Butterfield, who was present at the suggestion of Peter Cogger. A committee was appointed to raise funds for this object.

Steamer Glasgow Burned at Sea.

New York, Aug. 3.—The steamer Glasgow was burned at sea on the 31st of July, in latitude 46° 1', longitude 87 13. The passengers aboard were all saved by the bark Rosamond.

Another Project for Mexico.

New York, Aug. 3.—The World's Washington special dispatch says there are several western officers, who distinguished themselves in the late war, offering their services to the Liberal Government of Mexico, through the Minister. They have pledged themselves, if any encouragement is given, to carry with them thousands of emigrants.

Ovations in honor of the Mexican Republic in New York.

New York, Aug. 4.—A significant ovation in honor of the Mexican Republic as represented in the United States by General Ortega took place last evening at 10 o'clock. A large assemblage gathered when the Seventh Regiment Band serenaded the distinguished Mexican, who, accompanied by two members of his staff and surrounded by a large number of American and Mexican citizens, made his appearance. The following extract from a letter written by Major General Phil Sheridan was read: "There is no use to beat round the bush in this Mexican matter. We should give a permanent government to that Republic. Our work in crushing rebellion will not be done until this takes place. The advent of Maximilian was a portion of the rebellion, and his fall should belong to its history. Most of the Mexican soldiers in Maximillian's army would throw down their arms the moment we crossed the Rio Grande." This letter was received by all present with enthusiastic expressions of gratification.

A Negro Plot.

New York, August 5.—The Post's Washington special dispatch says that the National Intelligencer has a statement of a plot that was discovered among a large number of negroes at Aquia Creek to assassinate the white laborers on the railroad. A company of soldiers arrested and imprisoned all the negroes and captured three weapons.

Tennessee Elections.

Nashville, Aug. 4.—At the Congressional election in this State on Thursday, Campbell, opposition candidate, carried the city by 201 majority. It is expected he will carry the District by 2,900 majority. Maynard of the Knoxville District, and Cooper of the Shelbyville District, Union candidates, have majorities as far as heard from, and will probably be elected. Colonel Stokes, Union, from Chattanooga District, is ahead as far as heard from. No reports from West Tennessee. The election through Middle Tennessee passed off quietly. No such interest was manifested as was expected. The vote generally is very light, over 2,000 votes less than are registered were cast in this city.

General Items.

New York, August 4.—Orders have been sent to General Sheridan authorizing him to cause to be mustered out of service all volunteer troops serving in the Department of Texas that he thinks he can spare.

The World's Washington special says that Consul General Hale, at Alexandria, Egypt, informs the State Department that there were 784 deaths from cholera between June 22th and July 17th.

Col. Johnson, late aid to Jeff. Davis, has been released on the ground that being a rebel officer, he was entitled to be placed on the same footing with other officers.

The Atlantic Telegraph—Foreign News.

New York, Aug. 13.—A Valentia telegram of July 19th says, the Great Eastern and the Caroline have arrived. All well. The former goes to Bantry to-day whilst the latter is laying the shore end of the cable. This will be accomplished on the 21st or 22d if the weather moderates. The steamers Terrible and Sphynx are also here.

The election returns of the 19th shows 745 members returned of whom 331 are liberal. A gain of two.

D'Israeli had been making a speech in which he expressed his conviction that the result of the election wouldn't diminish confidence in the conservative party. He asserted that the conservatives in Parliament would be superior to those elected in 1859. When the House falls into its position and is weeded of these liberal members against whom corrupt practices have been charged, he believed the political situation would be identical with what it was two months ago. Concerning the power and strength of the Government, he contended that the returns of so large an opposition party was fully as much as could have been expected.

The cholera had broken out in Birmingham. Large numbers of people are said have been attacked.

The Spanish notes relative to the recognition of Italy, will contain no condition or restriction of an essential character, and progression is sure. Meetings will soon be held at Madrid to determine what course to pursue at the next election.

Petty Practice.—The Chinese [illegible] as elsewhere on the coast, are a disreputable [illegible] of vagabond morals. There is [illegible] character about them that we have been able [illegible]. Their evidence should [illegible] than that of the wildest savage [illegible] reputation of a white man is in any way at stake [illegible] are unmitigated liars. Taken as a whole, [illegible] are becoming more generally known [illegible] after to hear of more straightforward [illegible] the moon eyed [illegible] Recorder's Court [illegible] shall comprehend [illegible] rely upon, they are more vagrant [illegible] than white people generally give them credit [illegible]. A case in point will serve to show their [illegible]. On Saturday evening last a couple of highly respectable young men named George H. [illegible] entered the establishment [illegible] near the [illegible] Foundry on First street for the purpose of getting their clothes which had been left for the wash. An uncouth and dirty John, an attaché of the shanty, undertook to extort a sum of money from the young men [illegible] to the amount actually due the Chinaman, which they very properly refused to pay, and were about leaving the place, when the door was locked and about twenty Chinamen rushed into the room, commencing a general attack on the white men [illegible] down. A messenger of the tribe was dispatched for an officer at the outbreak [illegible] on the usual complaint of assault and battery, which to look over the arrest book may be found on nearly every page for the past year. Code was brought into custody and appeared before the Recorder [illegible] the facts of the case were elicited [illegible] was then placed under bonds [illegible] when, if we are not mistaken, he will be made to realize that the tables are fairly turned against them and that their sharp practices and the complaints [illegible] reversed, on account of having [illegible] the wrong [illegible].

Mining in Owyhee.—A former resident of this city writing to a friend here thus speaks of mining in Owyhee: "Quartz mining is the almost prettiest [illegible] high-toned business in the world. No making out bills, bad debts, or greenbacks about it. All you have to do is to crush a lot of ugly, dirty looking rocks and you get your pay in hand in gold and silver bullion. I used to think that my friends who wrote me about the richness of these mines, were afflicted with quartz on the brain, but now that I have examined for myself, I am convinced there is wealth enough in Oro Fino Mountain alone to pay off the national debt. New discoveries are being made nearly every day, and those who have friends among the prospectors can obtain feet easily, but this will not last long; and those parties in the Willamette who want an interest in the mines had better invest soon—the sooner the better. About two weeks ago the Trask and [illegible] ledge was discovered, of which you have no doubt already been informed. From information derived from reliable sources I have no doubt that it is the richest thing yet struck. I was informed that $1,000 per foot had been offered for the ore, and I came to the conclusion that it 'capped the climax' and could not be beaten, but a few days after we were startled by the news that a richer and better lode had been found near to it. Mr. [illegible] and Mr. Minear visited both ledges and confirmed the reports made of them. Mr. Sheppler is building his mill of granite, it will be a splendid building. Messrs. Morse & Voss are about to [illegible] a crushing rock. The Ainsworth mill [illegible] repairs. Minear and Moore & Fogus are [illegible] their mills night and day, doing a large amount of work. I do not see a man from Virginia City, who does not say our mines are richer than those of Washoe ever were."

[illegible] Tragedy.—One of those circumstances which carries with it a double desire for revenge on the part of the [illegible], was related to us last evening as happening on Front street yesterday, by a person who is perfectly [illegible] for what he asserts, and we are loth to believe that the good name of this city will suffer the circumstance to pass by unnoticed. It seems that as the [illegible] were tearing up the old planking, two passers on the street, brothers named Murine, got into the way [illegible], when a worthless plank was thrown upon [illegible] of one, which prevented his getting out of the [illegible] safely, although he struggled to do so. This [illegible] infuriated a laborer who happened to be nearest [illegible] when he dealt him a most violent blow on the head which fell him to the ground. He was then beset by two other workmen, and pounded until life was extinct. The body was not removed for a half hour last [illegible] although the City Marshal was repeatedly urged [illegible] it taken away. The brother escaped fortunately [illegible] his life, although beset by a crowd in a most brutal [illegible]. They had done nothing to interfere with the [illegible] to call out such violent usage, and it is [illegible] singular that no arrests have been made.

[illegible]—Our informant has just returned from the Marshal's office. No papers are yet issued for the arrest of the parties, and the body of Murine is still lying in the [illegible].

[illegible]. A special informant has just arrived and reports that Murine is the Italian word for rat.

Treaty with the Snakes.—By private letter from Lieutenant McCall, dated August 13th, 1865, we learn that [illegible] Huntington had completed a treaty with [illegible], the Chief of the Snake Indians, and his band, at Fort [illegible] on the 12th. The old sinner, it is said, [illegible] in his desire for peace and gave the Superintendent assurances that some other bands would come in to treat. The Chief Wee-ow Wee now, who perhaps [illegible] who made the attack on Lieut. Hobert, was [illegible] at a great distance from Fort Klamath, and [illegible] another Chief, was in camp near Puebla valley. [illegible] had been sent out to have them come [illegible]. These treaties are deemed to be of the [illegible] at this time, not only to secure success to the [illegible] road, but for the general welfare of that part of [illegible]. The services of three Indians had been [illegible] as interpreters and guides for the surveying party [illegible] one of whom was a former member of [illegible] band, and is thoroughly acquainted with the [illegible] through which the surveyors shall explore. [illegible] the region exceeds the expectations of the [illegible].

[illegible] Stage Driver.—A good story is told of [illegible] well known driver of stage coaches—which shows him to be a remarkably liberal, as well as a remarkably good natured man. It appears that Ward had a friend in Coyote who was the possessor of numerous "shares" in rich leads, but who had not the very desirable [illegible] to get along and "realize" sufficient with all his [illegible] to procure a mill for developing his [illegible] to Ward for advice in the matter [illegible] that his friend had a good thing, and promised [illegible] for him a ten stamp mill, accordingly [illegible] he forwarded in good order a coffee [illegible] stamps attached, and is now wait[ing] [illegible] "clean up" to be reimbursed.

[illegible] Fact.—A writer in Hours at Home, giving [illegible] of one of the noblest Generals of [illegible] in whom all Oregonians take a [illegible] other things tells the following concerning [illegible] modesty: "He became attracted [illegible] young lady at Springfield, while he was engaged [illegible] in forwarding supplies to the army [illegible] her some attention, he was altogether [illegible] to venture upon such a step. He had a gay young [illegible] in his office, whom he induced to take the [illegible] out riding, while he (Sheridan) furnished the [illegible]. The [illegible] Little Captain could often be seen [illegible] on this arrangement. Courting by [illegible] to please him as much as if he had been [illegible]. What the result was we never learned [illegible] possible that Eddy carried off the [illegible]."

Death of Mrs. H. W. Corbett.—The friends of Mrs. H. W. Corbett will be pained to learn of her death which [illegible] on the 27th of last month in New York city as [illegible] through private telegram received in this [illegible]. Mr. and Mrs. Corbett sailed for New [illegible] a few weeks since, at which time the health of [illegible] was very feeble, and grave doubts were felt [illegible]. The estimable qualities of the lady, [illegible] and liberal disposition, had endeared her to the [illegible], in which she resided, and her death will be [illegible].

[illegible]—Henriotta Anderson is becoming [illegible]. She was not recently [illegible] sentence in the city jail for having [illegible] with a pocket pistol in the [illegible] day sent back from the Recorder's [illegible] charge, to serve a new term. She [illegible] pistol practice in a crowded street, is [illegible] exercise. The Justice has [illegible] the case of this unfortunate girl no doubt, [illegible] of certain revolting circumstances connected [illegible], which, if made public, would [illegible] of crime which has quite effected [illegible]. We are not prepared at this time to disclose [illegible] of the bitter record.

[illegible] Settlement.—A correspondent in the [illegible] writing in relation to the claims of the [illegible] and Puget Sound Agricultural Company [illegible]. "Mr. Editor, why does not your journal speak a [illegible] such a bold faced attempt to rob [illegible]?" The editor replies to the [illegible] that the publication of the laws of Congress [illegible] crowd his columns that he has little space to [illegible] expositions on the subject alluded [illegible] should issue a supplement to expose [illegible] such circumstances.

The Weather.—This ever fruitful topic of conversation must be synonymous with newspaper reporters. The [illegible] has declined considerably the past two days, and the nights are very pleasant. Dealers in ice cream and soda water report a decline in the consumption of those cooling articles. The thermometer at [illegible] writing and it is mid-day, indicates only [illegible] W[e] shall see.

The Immigration.—A number [illegible] the Atlantic [illegible] this season, have already made their appearance in this valley. Others will be very likely [illegible] follow, as the [illegible] of last winter will show [illegible] the mountains are not [illegible] in winter, after a tedious trip across the continent.

[illegible] an Officer.—Charles Dunshan was yesterday [illegible] to jail for twenty days for having resisted the City [illegible] while under arrest. There is still another [illegible] against him in [illegible] Court of assault and [illegible] a pistol on a woman, which will be tried when he comes forth from durance vile.

Going to Salt Lake.—The Vedette of the 8th, says: Mrs. Julia Dean Hayne will shortly appear at the Salt Lake Theatre for a limited season, sustained by the [illegible].

[illegible]—The 1st Oregon Cavalry has been consolidated into a battalion, Capt. Mathews in command, [illegible] at Lapwai.

[illegible]—A large saddlery was established at the [illegible] and commission house of Mr. A. [illegible] Richardson [illegible] day. The stock must be sold to day.

The Sister's Academy for young ladies at Vancouver, both for boarders and day scholars, will re-open on Friday of this week.

The Orizaba.—The steamship Orizaba will leave for Victoria and San Francisco this afternoon at five o'clock.

The Meeting Last Evening.—Quite a large audience collected last evening at the Methodist Church to listen to Messrs. Bigby of California and Ashley of Ohio, who had been announced to speak. General Hamilton was called upon to preside over the meeting, and on taking the chair made some very felicitous remarks. Mr. Bigby was then introduced to the audience. This gentleman spoke for nearly an hour, making a very good speech. He began by remarking that the East had hitherto understood the West but very imperfectly, but that our public men all over the country were now getting a clearer and fuller conception of all the interests and requirements of the nation. Having dwelt briefly on this and kindred subjects, the speaker remarked upon the number, importance and magnitude of the duties which would devolve upon the next Congress, and showed they would be of a far more delicate nature than any that have ever before engaged the attention of that body. Great questions were now removed from the field, where they had been partly settled by the arbitrament of war, to the Cabinet and the halls of Congress, and great patriotism, firmness and wisdom would be required to carry the country safely through the danger that still environs it. Slavery and its relation to the great conflict were briefly discussed. The speaker pointed the audience to the falseness, treachery and unutterable infamy of the so called Democratic party, and showed how it had been an ally of the rebellion from the beginning. After speaking of the Constitutional Amendment, and explaining to the audience the distinguished part which Mr Ashley bore in getting it through the Lower House, Mr. Bigby concluded his remarks.

Mr. Ashley next arose. He made many very intelligent and practical remarks upon the mines and mining interests of this coast, showing that he is accurate and discriminating an observer as he is as an active and reliable worker. "People at the East," he said, "know very little about our mines. In this matter they are often misled by those who go from here to sell their mining stock. These enthusiastic sellers exhibit very rich quartz at the East, and from these specimens the people there erroneously conclude that our mountains are made of gold. From this conclusion springs an idea that it would be a capital thing to tax or sell the mines and pay our great debt with the money." The speaker went on to show the uselessness and folly of endeavoring to raise any considerable revenue in this way. He would not have the Government sell the mines, for this would bring about collusion and fraud, throw the most valuable parts of our public domain into the hands of foreign capitalists, check the production of gold and result disastrously every way. He was in favor of the Government's giving to the occupant or miner a title to the land when he had found and located his claim.

Mr. Ashley spoke at some length of national affairs. Every one who heard him could not fail to notice how thoroughly his whole mind is imbued with the spirit of human freedom. He spoke of the difficulties that beset our people in the early part of the struggle, and remarked that our course was plain and our success uninterrupted "from the moment we began to regard the conscience of the great question that was before us." He related how laborious were the efforts that were required to carry the great Amendment through Congress, and spoke of the scene that transpired at the time when the measure was passed. The supreme importance of ratifying the Amendment was touched upon, and the speaker hoped that Oregon would not be derelict in performing the part that was given her to do.

We do not profess to give more than a very imperfect outline of these very interesting and important addresses. To have appreciated them fully it was necessary to hear them. If Mr. Ashley shall be able to return here in a few days as he hopes to do, he expresses his willingness to speak more at length upon National topics. Our citizens will certainly be eager to hear him.

Pacific Railroad.—A writer in the National Intelligencer, signing himself "Pacific," says, now that the war is practically at an end and more than one million of men thereby return to the peaceful pursuits of life, it becomes the duty of every well wisher of his country's fame and fortune to divert the attention of those returned soldiers to some attractive civil pursuit or business, and to dissuade them from harboring in their minds the more exciting scenes of war. The writer says:

"A more glorious opportunity never offered to the acceptance of the friends of popular government, and I make this appeal, not so much from fear that they will not avail themselves of it, as to present a laudable enterprise, a great national work—the Pacific Railroad—for their consideration and acceptance.

"There is now a larger amount of money in the country than at any former period, which is already seeking investment in the more profitable enterprise of civil life, such as commerce, manufactures and mechanic arts, and I see no reason why at least one hundred millions of dollars of this money may not be diverted from those already over supplied pursuits, and be as profitably invested in the creation of a railroad connecting the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards.

"This amount of capital will profitably employ one hundred thousand of our returned soldiers upon the line of this road, thereby diverting many from the contemplation of war and other exciting pastimes, and place them in positions where they may be of equal service to themselves and the Government, as they will, if judiciously distributed along the road, hold the Indians in check and amply protect the United States mail.

This hundred thousand men sent out to build this railroad will soon give place to another hundred thousand as they will pass along, one by one, into the gold mines, where they will engage in mining pursuits, more remunerative to themselves and quite as important to the Government, as their labors must necessarily add to the mineral product of the country, thus increasing the amount of taxable property and lightening individual taxes. Added to these important considerations will be the prospect of speedily uniting the ocean commerce of the two hemispheres, which will not only invite, but attract the wealth and business of the world into the very heart and center of our continent. It will also take from our superabundant circulating currency one hundred millions of dollars, and invest it permanently in one of the noblest, one of the grandest works of internal improvement that ever honored, adorned and blessed a government and people.

"I make these suggestions for the purpose of calling the attention of the public, and especially the people of the Pacific coast, to the foregoing facts, and to stimulate them, if possible, to the accomplishment of these most laudable purposes."

Daring Attempt at Robbery and Murder.—Mr. Henry C. Coe, of Hood River, furnishes us the particulars of a most daring attempt at robbery and murder, which occurred on Saturday evening last. It appears that a couple of men with their faces blackened and partly masked, went to the residence of Mr. E. Ives, living on Hood river, and demanded either his money or his life. The robbers met Mr. Ives a few yards from the house, and there made the assault. While parleying with the ruffians, he succeeded in backing into his house, and there made the best resistance possible. One of the robbers grappled, and in the struggle Mr. Ives was badly beaten about the head and face with the club end of a revolver. His wife was present and compelled to witness the murderous assault upon her husband, without being able to render him effective assistance. A lady who happened to be stopping at the house, saw the robbers approach, and snatching up a child, succeeded in making her escape. It was through her that alarm was raised, and the neighbors hurried to the scene, but not until after the robbers had left. After beating Mr. Ives until he was insensible, the desperadoes turned upon his wife and demanded the money in the house, but before this was handed over they took the alarm and fled. The robbers were traced by their tracks for about a mile and a half, but no clue was obtained that led to their discovery. Circumstances went to show they were well acquainted with the premises. Such an affair in so quiet a community as that of Hood river, occasioned great excitement, and caused all the settlers to feel more or less uneasy. A sharp look out is being kept for the perpetrators of the outrage, and it is hoped that they may yet be brought to justice.—Mountaineer.

For the East.—Senator Nesmith started yesterday morning on his return to Washington. He travels overland, and after stopping a day or two at the Umatilla Reservation, will continue on to Boisé, thence to Salt Lake, and so on to the end of his journey. The Senator will examine the condition of Indian Affairs in Utah, Montana and Colorado Territories, his report upon which will be looked for with interest. In Congress, as out of it, there is a great deal of sympathy for "Lo! the poor Indian," which is altogether misplaced. It is from such men as Senator Nesmith that we may look for such statements as will undeceive our public men, and give them an idea of how worthless the Indian is, even under the most favorable circumstances.—Mountaineer.

Most Remarkable.—In its effects, and most useful in its application, the Fragrant Sozodont has become the most popular Dentrifice in existence. 'Tis used and praised by everybody. Sold by all Druggists and Perfumers.

Fever and Ague is not a Disease, it is but a symptom. The liver is the part affected and to this organ should medication be directed. The arrest of the chills and fever is not a cure of the disease. It is but the suspension of a symptom, liable to return on the first over-exertion of mind or body. In restoring the liver to healthy action, not only that symptom—fever and ague—disappears, but those other symptoms, a sallow complexion, jaundiced eye, pain in the side and shoulder, depression of spirits. OSGOOD'S INDIA CHOLAGOGUE is the appropriate remedy. It invigorates the liver, relieves the system of bilious accumulations, and by removing the cause effects a thorough and permanent cure.

Union and Liberty

Flag of the heroes who left us their glory,
Borne through their battle-fields' thunder and flame,
Blazoned in song and illumined in story,
Wave o'er us all who inherit their fame!
Up with our banner bright,
Sprinkled with starry light,
Spread its fair emblems from mountain to shore,
While through the sounding sky
Loud rings the Nation's cry,—
UNION AND LIBERTY! ONE EVERMORE!

Light of our firmament, guide of our Nation,
Pride of her children, and honored afar,
Let the wide beams of thy full constellation
Scatter each cloud that would darken a star!

Empire unsceptred! what foe shall assail thee,
Bearing the standard of Liberty's van?
Think not the God of thy fathers shall fail thee,
Striving with men for the birthright of man!

Yet if, by madness and treachery blighted,
Dawns the dark hour when the sword thou must draw,
Then with the arms of thy millions united
Smite the bold traitors to Freedom and Law!

Lord of the Universe! shield us and guide us,
Trusting thee always, through shadow and sun!
Thou hast united us, who shall divide us?
Keep us, O keep us the MANY IN ONE!
Up with our banner bright,
Sprinkled with starry light,
Spread its fair emblems from mountain to shore,
While through the sounding sky
Loud rings the Nation's cry,—
UNION AND LIBERTY! ONE EVERMORE! —Holmes

Symkin Slink's Money Bag.

CHAPTER I.

HOW THE BAG WAS FILLED.

Symkin Slink was a tinker by trade, but business somehow did not thrive with him. He could manage from his earnings to live, but that was all. He resided in a small house, consisting of one room, which was scantily furnished. In front of this little dwelling he had erected himself a booth in which to display his wares, and would sit there day after day watching for customers to come and buy, who never did come, and of course didn't buy. His father had been a tinker before him, with equal success. Old Slink had once been a rich man, at least so he boasted, but misfortunes had fallen thick upon him, and he had to work hard to gain a living for himself and son. When talking of his former state of plenty, he would refer to an old canvas bag, which he declared he once kept full of bright gold pieces.

"My son, Symkin," he would say, "when you can fill that bag as it was once filled, you will be a rich man, and need envy no noble in all the land." And thereupon he would take a mighty draught of ale, indeed, he was rather too fond of mighty draughts, and was, I am sorry to say, rather a disreputable fellow, and finished by drinking himself out of this world.

Symkin was not of a desponding mind, so, when left to shift for himself, he worked manfully, and always looked upon the bright side of things. What a happy gift that is, to be able to see the silvery lining and take no note of the sable clouds, some people, like fools, of course, when they find themselves in the Queen's Bench, will not be merry and jovial, but curse their fate and say they are miserable creatures. But others, the true philosophers of this world, when they march off to that place of confinement, only think of the great pleasure it will be when they get out again. "No one," the jovial philosopher will say, "who has always been at large can know such a pleasure as this." And is he not right? As I cannot speak from experience, I had better not speak at all.

Symkin worked hard, I say, and if each man had his deserts he would have been overflowing with wealth. But it was not so, and Symkin took it all for the best. He had hung up the old money bag in his room, and when he had an idle fit come upon him, he would look upon his father's legacy. "Symkin," he said at such times, "you have got to fill that bag with broad pieces, so get to work, you lazy dog!"

With all his poverty, Symkin was a happy man. We, I speak of the middle class, are apt to wonder how the mechanic, who works hard all day, can be content with his lot, and does not long to live in such houses as we do. No doubt the mechanic thinks the same of the Irish laborer, and the duke and duchess of us. But are we the less happy for that? Of course all men wish for more; but is not our ambition for a large house and carriage and six-foot flunkies, and I know not what, the same thing as the mechanic's longing for a little more pay and a little less work, a little more pleasure and a little less pain, and so on?

And so Symkin Slink was happy—and would have been able to supply the Sultan, in the Eastern story with that celebrated shirt which was so necessary to his health—but for one thing for which he still longed. He wished to be married, and how could he marry on such ridiculous earnings as his? And he thought the only way to get out of the difficulty was to fill that money bag at home; but, ah! he never could fill it. He had fallen in love already, as a sort of preparation for the event which he hoped would some day happen. Joan Mincing (the daughter of widow Mincing, who kept the Golden Bell) was his choice, and it was settled that as soon as that wonderful money bag was filled they should be man and wife, but not till then.

One evening Symkin took his parting drink at the Golden Bell, and was striding on as fast as his long legs would carry him, when he fell a thinking of his affairs; and he thought a great deal about them too; he turned them this way and turned them that, but always came to the same conclusion, which was, that the bag had nothing in it, and he saw no chance of anything getting there; and so he thought, and thought, and thought, when—clink—his foot struck against something, and of course it was a purse. Ay! and a purse worth finding, too. It was one of those bags, embroidered on the front, which the nobility of that time wore at their girdles. With trembling fingers Symkin undid the button, peeped in, cut a caper, threw his stick into the river and ran home as fast as he could. Once there, he bolted the door, looked to the fastenings of the shutter, and proceeded to examine his treasure; there were plenty of gold pieces there, and he counted them over and over again, and chinked them on the table, placed them in a pile, in a line, in a circle, tumbled them in a heap, and ran them through his fingers. Besides the gold, he found some rich jewels, a gold chain or necklace (with a large ruby hanging thereto) a bracelet and a brooch. The next thing he did was to take down his money bag and cram it full of the precious metals. "Ah! ah!" said he, rattling it against the table, "filled at last, old boy; I need envy no noble now."

When the first transports of joy were over, he dug a hole in the clay floor beneath his straw pallet, and there buried the bag and retired for the night. But he could not sleep; the swinging of the sign-board sounded like some one forcing the door; the whistling of the wind down the narrow lane he imagined was a burglar signalling to his comrade, so he was obliged to take down a large bill and stand guard over the treasure until daylight streamed in at the chinks of the window.

He shut up his house that day earlier than usual, and digging up his bag, secured it on his person, having first examined the contents a second time. I fear he never thought of seeking who was the rightful owner, but if he had, there was no police in those days—only the watch, who were anything but detectives; so he took out the brooch as a present to Joan. He didn't walk as jauntily as usual, but looked at every one whom he met with suspicion, and grasped his cudgel firmly. He was not used to be disturbed in his sleep at nights, but last night he certainly was wakeful; he was not used to bolt and bar his door, but rested in ease, with the idea that nobody would think it worth while to enter; heretofore, when he walked abroad, he had a merry greeting for all, and was in no fear of footpads, for all they could expect from him was a broken head. But, ah! he was a rich man now, and had something to lose, so he walked and slept uneasily, and was in constant fear. In this uneasy manner he sped on, until he came in sight of the Golden Bell, when he breathed more freely, so he stepped on jauntily, strode across the threshold of the tavern, into the little parlor and roared, "A cup of mulled sack, drawer!"

CHAPTER II.

HOW SYMKIN SPED WITH HIS TREASURE.

Widow Mincing was a sharp, matter of fact woman, attended to her business well, and was shrewd and yet kindly. When she first discovered the little love affair between Symkin and Joan, she did all in her power to stop it, but when it became too strong for her, she wisely gave in. For all that she looked upon the merry tinker with no great favor, and considered him a thoughtless, though good hearted young fellow, whom she could love as a friend, but as a son in law—ah! he had no money, and so she came to that determination as to the filling of the money bag, which neither of them could openly object to, although both did so secretly. When Symkin called for a cup of mulled sack she thought he was decidedly mad. "Mulled sack," she muttered, "and where's the money to come from?"

"Never fear, mother!" cried Symkin, gaily. "My money bag is filled at last! Look here!" And he shook the bag over his head and brought it down with a crash on the table. "Here, pretty Joan," he continued, taking the bewildered maiden round the waist, "here's a little brooch for thee; see how it glitters in the light."

"A pretty brooch indeed!" cried Mother Mincing, snatching it from his hand. "Joan shall touch no such thing; she is an honest woman's daughter. How came you by all this treasure?"

"Marry, I found it!" cried Symkin, jovially. "And a pretty find it was, too. See here!" And he spread the broad pieces on the table, before the greedy eyes around him.

"Found it!" cried Mother Mincing. "Ay, in a gentleman's pocket, I'll be bound; poor people don't come by such things honestly."

"Nay, nay, good mother," said Symkin, "as honestly as the day is light. Why, look you, you promised me that when I could fill my old money bag, little Joan should be mine. Didn't she, Joan? And now you turn your back on me, and call me a thief!"

Joan was evidently inclined to her mother's belief, and on being pressed by her lover, only replied, "Sure it's good gold, if it be well come by."

"Why, look you!" said Symkin hotly, "have I deserved this? A hard working fellow like I cannot pick up a little money, but I must be thought a thief and a murderer for anything I know!"

"Ay," said Mistress Mincing, "very likely!"

"Why, by all that's unholy!" (only he didn't put it in such a mild way) "would you swear my character away before you hear what I have to say? Ask anybody here; ask Gaffer John; little Andrew; Mark; ask anybody if they have ever known me to do a dishonest action."

"Not I," said the tailor, "always as true and fair as a new bowstring."

"Nor I," cried little Andrew, "Symkin was always of the right sort, always ready to drink with a man, and break his crown afterwards." And he handed him his cup.

Symkin put it aside with some heat, for he was thoroughly roused, and told his story as plainly as he could.

"Hout, tout!" said the old woman, when he had finished. "Do you suppose that I am going to believe any such story as that? Not I!"

"Do you think I'd tell a lie?" roared Symkin.

"A man who would steal would tell a hundred lies!" screamed his opponent, "and I firmly believe you're no better than you should be; so march off, my good sir. I won't have any vagabonds in my house!"

This was past endurance, so Symkin declared he would lodge for no man or woman in the world, and sat down to his sack, which had been prepared during the hot controversy. "Come lads," said he, "you won't turn your backs upon me, I know. Drawer! bring your best sack for all, if your mistress will allow you."

"Though it be ill gotten it may be well spent," replied the dame, and, with this salve to her conscience, she served her customers, and so they sat drinking till midnight.

Before leaving Symkin went up to Joan to bid her good night; her mother he would not look at. "Now look here, my little Joan," said he, "is it fair that because I have filled my agreement, you should throw me off like this?"

"I did'nt throw you off," said Joan. "how can you say so, when you know I didn't!" and she was in a fair way of crying.

"At least your mother did," continued her lover, "and you know you don't think so well of me as you did."

"Well," said Joan, "but how did you get all that money?"

"Haven't I told you? I found it in the road."

"Oh!" she said.

"That 'oh!'" cried Symkin, "means that you don't believe me? Good night," and he went off abruptly.

When he went out the next night to have his usual evening pot of ale, he was undetermined which house to patronize. Mother Mincing was out of the question; so he turned into the White Hall where he was used to go before he was attracted elsewhere by a pair of blue eyes. When he entered he found but a few people assembled, but amongst others there was an old crony of his, Master Grundling by name, a short, fat, pursy, red-faced man, who was one of the city watch, and considered, among his small circle of friends, a very important man, indeed quite a superior sort of person, you know, and there he sat drinking from a large flagon, and warming his toes at the fire.

CHAPTER III.

HOW IT WAS EMPTIED.

"Why, Symkin, man," cried the jolly Grundling, "where hast thou hidden thyself all this time? what hast thou been doing?"

"I've been making a fool of myself; that's what I've been doing," replied Symkin, with a growl.

"Ah!" said Grundling, "a pretty face is it? I myself had a weakness that way when I was a young man; no one could dance so well as Master Grundling, no one could beat him at single-stick, or tilt better at the quintin than he, and it was all for the love of the ladies; and now, you see, I'm doomed to remain an old bachelor. Well! well, it's a lover's quarrel?"

"Worse!" growled Symkin, ripping out an oath; "I've had a row with the whole lot of them!"

"That's bad! but cheer up man; if it's a true lass, you'll do yet. Run away with her, lad."

"I'll go hang myself first!"

"I'll tell you what it is, Sym," said the jovial Grundling, "you want excitement, lad, you want something to rouse you from this back state of mind. Now take my advice and have a little excitement."

"I'll go to the wars," said Symkin.

"Now, there it is," cried Grundling, "you young men are all for the wars. My dear Sym. it's quite a mistake, there's no excitement in the wars at all, what if you kill a man? Well, he's killed, and there's an end of it! If you take a man prisoner he's handed over to the guard, and there's an end of that? What excitement is there in all this? Why none whatever; not to mention the discomfort, long marches, short rations, ragged clothes, hard work, and a good chance of being killed into the bargain. No, Symkin, I can tell you where you can find excitement and ease into the bargain, honor and a good dinner every day, a life of wild adventure, and a cosy flagon of ale every night. Symkin, join the watch!"

"The watch!" cried Symkin.

"Ay," said Grundling, "you are cut out for it; I want a young hardy fellow, for I'm growing old, Symkin, and getting somewhat stiff; but I'll manage any man single-handed still; the time was when I would take any two at single-stick. Well, Symkin, what say you, will you be one of the watch?"

"The watch be ——," cried Symkin.

"Why, lad! lad!" cried the old man, in astonishment, "what! are you in truth mad?"

"What have I to do with the watch?" asked the young man, somewhat more humbly, "walking about dirty streets, and shouting out the hour, the same night after night; faugh! I'll go to France with the King."

"Come! come! Symkin," urged Grundling, "you're too pretty a man to be knocked on the head so young. When you say that with us it is the same thing night after night, you know not what you are about. Why, the excitement is wonderful! Only the other night, I had to run down a great bulking vagabond, who had cut Sir Walter Callon's purse, I followed him three good miles, and brought him to bay in Bucklersbury. I had a hard tussle with him, and at last with the help of some of Sir Walter's men, he was seized and bound but 'twas no use, lad, the purse was gone, and he declared he had thrown it into the river, which was a pity, as there was much money in it and jewels."

"Ha!" cried Symkin, "what kind of purse was it?"

"A large purse of yellow leather," said Grundling.

"Embroidered with gold cord and seed pearl?"

"With tassels of the same?"

"With much gold in it?"

"And a rich bracelet?"

"And a gold chain?"

"With a ruby?"

"A brooch?"

"Set with emeralds?"

"Hurrah!" shouted Symkin; "I've got the purse, man!—I've got the purse! I found it t'other day, and it has made me miserable ever since. We'll go to Sir Walter Callon to-morrow morning, and——ah!" Symkin's face fell woefully.

"What's the matter?" asked Grundling, scarcely recovered from his astonishment.

"I've spent a lot of it," replied Symkin.

"Never fear, man. Sir Walter will only be too glad to get any of the money back. He has a good heart, has Sir Walter. Well, then, Symkin, be ready for me betimes to-morrow morning, and so, good night!" and he took his staff and toddled home one way while Symkin went the other.

The next morning they (Symkin with the purse) set out for the house of Sir Walter. The city was all busy, particularly near the river side, with hammering of iron and steel, and men were packing boats with luggage, and stowing horses in ships, and bawling and shouting, and making as much noise as they could, for that great expedition was about to sail for the coast of France which was to end in Agincourt.

"That's where I mean to go," said Symkin, jerking his thumb at one of the transports, "as soon as ever I get rid of this lazy gold."

"You should not revile good things," said Grundling, "and now I think of it, you had better pay my fees out of it, for Sir Walter is apt to forget such things, and [illegible] remind him of them." So he helped himself liberally, choosing six of the heaviest pieces, and poor Symkin supposed it was all right.

"See," cried Grundling, "here comes Sir Walter himself!"

And as he spoke, a knight unarmed, rode into the street, followed by his squires and men-at-arms. He was a young man, in purple velvet doublet with scolloped sleeves, and pointed shoes, embroidered with gold, his squires bore his armor and weapons, and his clump of spears made a goodly show.

Grundling stood bowing and scraping, in some confusion at the sudden appearance of the knight, but at last managed to tell the story.

"This is an honest fellow," said Sir Walter, looking at Symkin. "Would'nt like to go to the wars, sirrah?"

"I have had a hanging that way for some time, sir knight," replied Symkin, "but before I return you this purse, I have to ask your pardon."

"Granted, fellow, unless it be treason," cried the knight; "speak on."

"Sir Knight," said Symkin, "I have in my ignorance spent some of the bright money, and for that, I crave your pardon."

"Pardon you!" cried the knight, "heartily, but more of this anon."

"And indeed, sir, I took not all that you will find wanting." Here Grundling began to punch him vigorously. "My friend here, a most honest watch, as honest as all as you may wish to see, has had his fees out of it, some six pieces."

"Six pieces for fees, you rascal!" cried the knight raising his whip. Grundling, in spite of his size, made off in double quick time, amidst the laughter of all the men.

Symkin eagerly embraced the offer of Sir Walter to enter his band of men at arms, and was placed in the charge of one of the others, with orders to be equipped.

"May it please you, sir knight," said Symkin, a little red, "but I would like to wish good bye to one with whom I have had a little difference before I leave."

"A lass, is it!" said the knight, "go then, and that quickly."

And Symkin sped off to Mother Mincing's; the first thing he did was to take that good woman in his arms, and kissed her on both cheeks, and then did the same to Joan.

"I've not got the money," cried Symkin, "it's all gone, and I am happy again."

After many questions and cross questions, the whole story came out, and, for a wonder, Mother Mincing believed it.

"Let bygones be bygones," said Symkin, "and you will wait for me, little Joan, won't you?"

"That I will," she replied. "I'll wait till I'm an old maid, and you'll forgive me that foolish [illegible]."

Her mouth was somehow stopped at this part of her speech, and Symkin said, "If I come back without any legs will you love me still?" She declared she would, and if necessary would wait fifty years. And she did wait for him, although not so long as that, and when he became Sir Walter Callon's head ranger, she became Mrs Slink.

When Symkin had left the "Golden Bell," he hastened to his own huts, broke the pots and pans in pieces, smashed the bench, and made the place a ruin. "This room," said he to himself, "has been witness to my misery, and so, now things are brightening, it may go to limbo!" And so we all send our poverty stricken rooms to limbo when we grow rich. Ignore that high school where we scribbled for a ridiculously small salary, erase that needle-work from the tables of our memory, blot out the fourpenny plate of a la mode and crust of bread—and so Symkin smashed his furniture.

He then took down the bag, folded it carefully up and placed it in his pocket. "Lie there, old boy," said he, patting it, "you shall remind me of the vanity of wishes. Ah! I always thought I should be exceeding glad when I had filled you with gold, but I find I am exceeding glad on emptying you."

"DAT-TING'S PLAYED OUT."—A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, writing from Nashville, July 10th, relates the following significant incident which recently transpired "way down in Tennessee":

At the corner of Cherry and Broad streets is a small but comfortable and popular theatre, called Poland's Theatre. There is no heavy tragedy or even standard comedy, ever performed there, but the manager understands, nevertheless, how to draw a crowd, and with the aid of pretty dancing girls and extravagant farces, he manages to attract a very considerable audience every night. This audience consists generally of soldiers, although there are many others who go to enjoy the laugh which may always be obtained there.

Two or three nights since I happened to be present at one of these exhibitions. There was the usual amount of singing, dancing, light comedy and broad farce. In one of the extravaganzas a theatrical manager is represented as having advertised for a company of performers. Soon after, a negro, dirty, ragged, old and dilapidated, presents himself and proposes to play an engagement. The manager asks him what he can play. With much assurance, he answers that he can perform almost anything. The manager then tries him on various parts, and, of course, the darkey ludicrously breaks down in each, to the infinite amusement of the lookers-on. The applause of the audience was redoubled at each successive failure.

At last the manager proposes to him to try a part in which he will not have much to say.

"Why won't I have much to say?" inquired Sambo.

"Well," says the manager, "your part is such a one that you won't be allowed to speak much."

"What's de reason I won't be allowed to speak?" says the indignant darkey.

"Because you're to be my slave," replies the manager.

"No, no; you can't come dat on dis chile."

"Well, but you see, it's only in the play."

"Yes," says Sambo, "I know it's in de play: but I tell you dat ting's played out."

No sooner had this sentence been uttered, than, from pit to dome, the little theatre was filled with a perfect thunder-storm of applause. It commenced with a loud laugh and universal hand-clapping and stamping of feet, it progressed to a tremendous yell; and it ended with a vast combination of all signs and noises by which an audience testifies its excitement and delight.

It was an unmistakable indication of the feeling and determination of the people, especially of the patriotic and liberty loving soldiery.

Nothing, indeed, could be more expressive, when applied to the wicked and treasonable institution of slavery, than the phrase used by the representative of Africa on the stage—"played out."

A YOUNG VETERAN.—There recently sat behind us a mild eyed boy of eighteen, well grown and intelligent, with the corporal's stripes upon his arm. He has turned leaves of experience that in the older Napoleon's day would have done honor to an Old Guard man. This boy of ours, at an age when most youths are in school, or yet the novitiate of active life, can look upon his twenty-two battles. He participated in all the tremendous scenes on Virginia soil, the advances and retrogrades, the successes and reverses whereby we wore out the strength of the rebellion and disciplined ourselves the while to be worthy to conquer in the name of liberty.

One day, four years ago, while playing marbles, or flying his kite, he had a severe attack of the drum. Tall of his years, and precocious, the spirit of patriotism wrestled hard with him. It was a case of prompt action and change of climate, and he was sent to the retired homestead in an Eastern State, with the injunction to help on the farm, be a good boy, and earn the encomiums of grand mama.

But the young eagle fluttered over the edge of the nest, and soared into the fields of blue. If the recording angel washed out generous Uncle Toby's oath with a tear, we doubt whether he would not kindly blot out the entry of a boy's falsehood, told with shining eyes and swelling heart to the mustering officer. At all events it is safe now to believe it, since, happily, the great day of boyish temptation is overpast, and they need no longer ask to be dismissed from school to go and save the country.

The youth of fourteen, having thus taken four years to himself, and getting the benefit of his stature by standing very erect in his shoes was in the Army of the Potomac before grandmama's frightened news of the flight had got home to the West. In all the vicissitudes of his companions in arms, he bore a part. He was in a fighting regiment. He saw it melt away in all the great battles before Richmond. With twelve inside survivors of his original company he washed off the blood of Antietam. He was in the thick of the battle of Gettysburg. Captured at Chancellorsville, he tasted the experience of prison life at Belle Isle. Re-enlisted he was in at the death and saw Lee lay down his arms. At the age when most boys come home from school he has returned from such soldier's experience as few men pass through unscathed, for he was never wounded.—Chicago Tribune.

TREASURY ESTIMATE OF COTTON.—The Secretary of the Treasury has procured reliable estimates of the quantity of cotton west of the Mississippi. The figures submitted to him would add up about 1,000,000 bales. Partial returns of the quantity of cotton east of the Mississippi have been received, from which an estimate somewhat exceeding 1,000,000 bales has been made. The Secretary is reported to be confident that the effect from exchanges of the vast values represented by this cotton will aid his efforts to restore the currency to a sound basis.

A Tennessee farmer in Rutherford county, Va., recently said to some soldiers who objected to his scale of prices for poultry, "I've allus been opposed to this rebellion; but if you 'uns won't pay but twenty-five cents apiece for chickens, when the Confederates used to give me a dollar, why, I'm done with your govern-ment."

ALLEN'S

LUNG BALSAM!

The Remedy for Curing

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS,

Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus, CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD; heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS' TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION. IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.
